CARMEL QUICK TO AID FLOOD STRICKEN AREA

"Flood suffering has already reached unprecedented proportions with needs steadily mounting. Only limit Red Cross assistance must be maximum generosity American people. Every possible member Red Cross staff now assigned to field for relief duty. I call upon all chapters to assume full initiative and mobilize every community resource to raise promptly largest possible amount."

This was the message wired to C. W. Lee, Chairman Carmel Chapter American Red Cross Wednesday afteanoon by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, National chairman.

Since Monday, the executive committee of Red Cross has been active in Carmel for the flood relief program and has been ready and willing to meet the increasing daily demands of American Red Cross to aid the great suffering among the people of the Ohio and Mississippi valleys.

"As always, the people of Carmel have responded nobly to the cry of distress," said Mr. Lee at Red Cross headquarters. "I called a special meeting of our committee on Sunday and we voted to meet the first quota out of our local fund. This check was forwarded on Monday. In the afternoon came a second call from Washington doubling the quota. By this time our citizens had been informed of the needs and donations began to flow into the Bank of Carmel, Monterey Trust and Savings Bank and our Red Cross Headquarters on Dolores street. The new quota was promptly met and when the third call came on Tuesday asking for five times the original amount we were able to meet the need and more."

Nearly $1500 had been subscribed up to Wednesday night and there is every indication of the Carmel response being the greatest sum ever given for disaster relief.

Over six hundred Red Cross nurses are now in the stricken area and three hundred trained relief workers. The San Francisco office has sent all of its disaster experts into the field. Great supply warhouses have been requisitioned on the edge of the flood area and Red Cross trains have been carrying food, medical supplies, tents, doctors, nurses into the disaster area daily.

Every dollar will aid some unfortunate person and no contribution is too small. It is planned to set up several street stands Friday and Saturday where contributions can be made.

Doud Estate Buys Carmel Building

In one of the largest business property transactions ever recorded in Carmel, the building facing on 75 feet of Ocean avenue, between Mission and San Carlos, housing the Purity store, Mission Cleaners, Mission Market and Carmel Smoke Shop, is in the process of changing hands this week. The former owner is George W. Wagner, of San Jose, who is reported to be putting his money into Palm Springs apartment houses. The Doud estate of Monterey is the purchaser.

FROM ALASKA

Coming down from Fairbanks, Alaska, to live in Carmel, Mr. and Mrs. Casper Ellingen are staying at Carmel Inn.

Mortar Freezes as Stone Masons Work Upon Walls

Here's one for the book, as Birney Adams says: During the recent cold snap the work of laying the chalk rock facing at the fire house had to stop. The mortar froze as fast as it was made, and faster than it could be slapped onto the rocks. So the masons just chipped the rock into shape and laid it out ready to go as soon as there was a little cooperation from the Weather Man.

DISCUSS LABOR RELATIONS

Representatives of the Monterey County Building Trades council invited members of the Monterey Peninsula General Contractors' association to meet with them at the Chamber of Commerce building Tuesday evening for mutual discussion of labor relations. According to M. W. Overhulse of Carmel, who presided as chairman; the purpose of the meeting was "to form plans for carrying on the building industry, and to lead up to working agreements between the different crafts and the contractors." This was regarded as a preliminary meeting, laying the groundwork for further discussions. As Carmel is the center of much of the building activity of the peninsula, the village was well represented, by both contractors and craftsmen.

GUESTS OF BURTS

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hart of San Francisco were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Burt over the week end.

Rain for Season Now 11.70 Inches

With the rains this week have come a break in the cold snap, and the feeling already that spring is in the air. Final reading for the week Thursday morning showed a total precipitation for the season of 11.70 inches, and it was still raining. Monday morning the Carnegie Coastal Laboratory rain guage measured .31 of an inch; Wednesday, .25, and Thursday, .34.

League Aids Delinquent Children

THE Coordinating Council method of dealing constructively and on a community basis with delinquent and predelinquent children was presented to a group of members of the Monterey County League of Women Voters by Kenyon J. Scudder, chief probation agent of Los Angeles county, at a luncheon Saturday at Pine Inn. The system was worked out by Dr. Virgil Dixon and August Vollmer 18 years ago in Berkeley, when the heads of various organizations and agencies were called in to put their heads together and work out some means of doing preventive work with children on the "ragged edge".

Mr. Scudder told of the 64 councils in Los Angeles county, 35 of which have been in successful operation for five years, and which have eliminated friction and duplication of effort; have enabled key people to get acquainted with each other, see the community and its needs as a whole rather from the standpoint of each organization.

Inner circle of a Coordinating Council is the "adjustment committee", formed of representatives of the schools, the police department, health department, and social service agencies. Next comes the character building committees; representatives of Boy and Girl Scouts, YMCA and YWCA, and an effort to extend the benefits of these organizations to the children who need them most.

The third or environment group consists of representatives of P.-T. A.'s, churches, playground directors, women's clubs, service clubs, and socially-minded but unaffiliated lay people.

With the aid of a map of Los Angeles county, Mr. Scudder showed how "focal points" of delinquency have been dissolved by activities of the Coordinating Councils, and how effective work with predelinquent children has stopped the spread of actual delinquency.

Gordon Campbell Bachelor of Law

Gordon Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Argyll Campbell, has graduated from University of Oregon law school, receiving his degree of Bachelor of Laws with the close of the semester at midwinter, and is now preparing to pass the California bar examination next September. He is at home with his parents, "boneing up" for the examination in his father's office, and gaining practical experience by watching the way his father handles tense situations—as for instance, the Monteery strike, which was settled yesterday largely as a result of the elder Campbell's efforts. Young Mr. Campbell graduated from Stanford with an A. B. degree, in 1932. He majored in political science and economics. He expects to settle on the peninsula.

Dance Tomorrow To Aid Cripples

When members of Carmel Post No. 512, American Legion, the Legion auxiliary, members of the Manzanita club and their friends dance tomorrow evening at Legion hall, it will be a part of the nation-wide celebration of President Roosevelt's birthday, and the proceeds will be used for the aid of infantile paralysis victims. The party will begin at 3, and dancing will continue until 2, to music of Allen Knight's orchestra. Refreshments will be served at midnight. Joe Caherwood is chairman of the committee planning the dance, and assisting him are H. S. Crossman, Pat Hudgins, James Regan, Earl Graft, Gail Chandler and Byington Ford.

Only Two Arrests During Past Week

With only two arrests made during the past week, both of them on Monday, the police department and Police Judge George P. Ross are still enjoying a brief respite from anything approaching a crime wave. Both arrests were for minor traffic violations, Marianna Carter and Clifford H. Lawman being the offenders.

Police department members are doubly thankful for Carmel's lack of crime, as they are attending the police school in Monterey each afternoon, the officers and Chief Robert Norton taking turns so that all may benefit. The instructors, L. E. Stockwell and Mack Stoker, are still teaching the officers, but they will leave soon and the officers will pool their knowledge and teach each other. The school, which is for chiefs and officers from Santa Cruz, San Benito and Monterey counties, is in session each afternoon from 2 to 5 in the Monterey city hall.

League Women Ask Husbands To Dinner

League husbands as well as league members and others who are interested are invited to attend a dinner meeting of the local League of Women Voters to be held this evening at 6:30 in the dining room of Pine Inn. The subject is to be "Juvenile Problems", amplifying an interesting discussion given at a special meeting last Saturday by Kenyon J. Scudder, Los Angeles county probation department chief.

There will be two speakers on the program following the dinner: Julian H. Alco, veteran in prison work, and Miss Ruth Turner, chairman of the San Francisco probation committee. Mrs. J. P. Sandholdt will preside as chairman of the meeting, and will be introduced by Mrs. Carl Voss, league president.

Beware Strange Dark Women!

If you must talk to strange, dark women in old grey sedans, do it with all your money and whatever other valuables you may own held tightly in one hand behind your back. The pickpockets are in town in the persons of two dark women believed to be either Mexicans or Gypsies, who robbed R. Rosenquist, a San Franciscan visiting here for his health, of $70 Sunday afternoon while he was walking along Scenic drive.

The two women drove alongside Rosenquist and asked the address of someone unknown to him. While they were talking, one of the women placed her hand over Rosenquist's heart, saying he looked ill and probably had heart trouble. Later, after the women had driven away, Rosenquist reached for his wallet, which was in a pocket directly under the place the woman's hand had been. His wallet was still there but $70 which had been in it was gone. He reported the incident to Carmel police but no trace has been found of the women.

It is believed that the women are the same pair who robbed a Carmel resident in a like manner some months ago.

Enabling Act Needed to Speed Disposal

In response to an editorial in last week's Pine Cone, Hugh W. Comstock, president of the Carmel Sanitary District Board, writes the following letter, in which he explains what is holding up action on the present disgraceful method, or lack of it, of sewage disposal here. Mr. Comstock has explained that before any steps can be taken to call a bond election for the purpose of building a new disposal plant to replace the one which ceased to function, it will be necessary for an enabling act to be passed by the legislature. At present raw sewage is being dumped on the beach south of Carmel Point.

Mr. Comstock's letter states:

Editor The Carmel Pine Cone:

I can fully understand and sympathize with your feeling of impatience over the existing conditions at the Point, and the seeming slow action and delay by the Sanitary Board in getting under way with plans for a new disposal system.

I only hope the voting public shares this same impatience and a high degree of interest over the matter this spring when they are called upon to act in the Bond election. This will be called as soon as we are out of the woods in legal entanglements which are the only causes for the lack of progress in correcting the present status of things.

The Pine Cone has always stood squarely behind the Board in its stand for needed improvements and removal from our Beach of so obnoxious a thing as an ocean disposal plant.

Your "challenge" in last week's Pine Cone is construed by me as constructive in spirit and an urgent reminder of the seriousness of the existing conditions. You may rest assured that the Sanitary Board has not lost interest nor swerved from its purpose, as unanimously expressed in an open statement printed in your paper just prior to the last Sanitary District Board election.

In the present session of the legislature an amendment is now being introduced by our counsel which will clear up the technical difficulties encountered. We hope that this matter will be handled as emergency legislation and go through promptly so that the plans can go forward with the utmost facility.

Hugh W. Comstock, President
Carmel Sanitary District Board.

Steen Skonhoft is now up and about after an uncomfortable bout with the flu.

Davis Home Will Be Wedding Scene

Already the lovely W. L. Davis home on Laurel avenue in Pacific Grove is assuming an air of excitement and expectation and is the subject of careful preparation, for Saturday evening it is to be the setting for the nuptials of Miss Iona Gibson and Virgil Eckell, both of Red Bluff. For the past week, the bride-to-be, who is the niece of Mr. and Mrs. Davis, her mother, Mrs. S. M. Gibson, the sister-in-law of Mrs. Davis, and the prospective bridegroom, have been the house-guests of the Davis family. After a family dinner Saturday evening, the ceremony will be performed with Reverend Stewart Potter of the First Presbyterian church of Monterey officiating, with only the immediate family present. Those witnessing the marriage of the attractive Miss Gibson and Virgil Eckell will be the bride's mother, Mrs. S. M. Gibson; her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Davis; her cousins, Miss Olivia Davis, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McLaughlin, and Miss Gwendolyn McLaughlin; and her uncle, W. H. Gibson of Dayton, Washington, who is visiting the Davis family.

Following their marriage, the young couple plan to make their home in Red Bluff, where Mr. Eckell is employed.

Mrs. Felton Elkins of Burlingame was a week end visitor at La Ribera.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

WHO should blow into town last Sunday morning but Arnold Genthe, the photographer, revisiting Carmel for the first time since he closed his San Francisco studio in 1911 and went east to New York, fame and fortune. He particularly wanted to see the house he built here in 1902, when the original old timers were doing their first building. Bewildered by the transformation of the village, he nevertheless found his way to Camino and Eleventh, banged on an old, familiar door. It was opened by James Thoburn, who lives there now.

From his old Carmel home Genthe went out to Carmel Point to see the Jeffers family, and to take some informal portraits of Robinson Jeffers. They recalled that it was through Genthe that the Jeffers' first heard of Carmel and its charms, and were moved to come here and investigate the village as a possible home.

Both in Carmel and in San Francisco, Genthe was an intimate of Jack London, Will Irwin, George Sterling, Perry Newberry, and others of that immortal band. He made the illustrations for Will Irwin's "Old Chinatown"; also for the published version of Hazelton & Benrimo's "Yellow Jacket", of Forest Theater memory.

Genthe was one of the first to experiment with color photography, and was one of the originators of the diffused outline technique. Many a famous phiz has posed before his camera, both in San Francisco and in New York. His autobiography, "As I Remember", has just been published.

Among his other published works are "Rebellion in Photography", "The Book of the Dance", "Old New Orleans", "Isadora Duncan — 24 Studies", and many illustrated magazine articles.

CHARLOTTE INGRAM, who operates beauty shops on boats going to the Orient and other far ports, when boats are running, is taking advantage of her enforced vacation to spend some time with her sister, Marie McFarland, who is also in the business of fostering feminine beauty. These sisters not only have the same vocation, but the same avocation as well. The daughters of a well-known Canadian sculptress, they model in clay—moulding it into shapes of loveliness with the same gifts,—if not the same tools—that they use so effectively in the booths of the beauty salon.

While Kay the Potter was in town both girls were enthused to take up their old hobby, which is a bit more than a hobby with them. Marie has made some lovely things, and Charlotte is developing a method which she describes as "pottery portraits"; plaques in high relief. She has a number of San Francisco commissions which are keeping her busy while she is visiting here.

The two girls came to California from Alberta, Canada—to get away from the cold weather. So long as it didn't get any colder than 30 below they could go skating, but when it got colder—.Once Marie was out in weather 55 degrees below zero, and so they decided to seek a milder climate. Some Canadian friends were through here not long ago, and did they have a great crow about California's balmy climate! Said it hadn't been colder than 10 below at home yet this year, and swore it felt colder than that in San Francisco.

Marie and Charlotte both studied at the California School of Fine Arts, and before that had studied painting with Lady Drummond Davis in Canada, and with Thomas B. Patton, long the official artist of the Canadian Pacific Railroad. They have an instinct for fine line very apparent in their use of potters' clay as an art medium.

"SNAP" Nelson, erstwhile Carmel "character", he who once rode his horse up Bert Heron's steps to pay his respects to the poet-mayor, is back in town. An old-time cowboy, whose wife writes his western yarns in vernacular just as he tells them to her, he has rambled widely over the west. Since leaving here several years ago, his adventures have been many, including a spell as a sunt rider in Hollywood, until the broken bones became too numerous for comfort. Most recently they have been in Arizona.

A FEW weeks back Bert Heron went to considerable trouble arranging a book display table in his Seven Arts book shop devoted to the theme of peace. One appreciative patron, he said, noticed and commented upon it without having her attention forcibly directed to it—just one. In the center of numerous volumes devoted to the theme of peace, Bert, with the lightest, deftest touch, placed a copy of the Holy Bible.

STRIKE up the band; Phil Nesbitt is in town. We thought he was off in China or somewhere, but he has a way of turning up at the oddest moments. Says he was well ahead on his stint of stories, with pictures, for the Chronicle, so flew back to his favorite village like a homing pigeon.

Artists' Cup to Be Given Tonight

With a large silver loving cup as the prize, peninsula artists tonight will vie for the favor of Carmel Theater goers. For the last six weeks, 18 paintings by local artists have been on display in the lobby of the Carmel Theater. Patrons of the show house have been given ballots on which to mark the number of the picture they like best, and tonight the votes will be counted. Frederic Burt will be master of ceremonies and other judges will be present on the stage. The stage ceremonies will begin at 8:45, culminating with presentation of the cup.

Carmel Dogs In Bay City Show

Carmel was well represented in the big show of the Golden Gate Kennel club at the Civic Center in San Francisco last Saturday and Sunday. Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Kehr, Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Gentry, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. E. Hanke and Miss Marian Kingsland all went up, each with entries representing their respective fancies. Most of the 26 Welsh terriers—making up the biggest entry of this breed so far on record in California shows—were from, or related to, Miss Kingsland's Del Monte Kennels, and the best Welsh terrier in the show, an Oklahoma City dog, was sired by one of her terriers. Mrs. E. T. Clark, president of the Welsh Terrier club, who judged this breed and the Irish wolfhounds, came to Carmel Monday and visited the Del Monte Kennels. Incidentally, it was an Irish wolfhound that went best dog in the show. All of the local dogs showed well, and won in their respective classes.

Brooms Disappear at "Clean Sweep" Car Sale

K. K. Bradbury of the Cypress Motor Company in Monterey has been having a used car sale during the last few days, but little did he realize the effect the sale would have on the people of Monterey. Mr. Bradbury called it a "clean sweep" sale because of his desire to clean his used car lot, and on the front bumper of each car he put a broom. At first there were long lines of cars, each with its broom, but the brooms have been disappearing rapidly, and now over 50 of them have been stolen. Only a few remain. Mr. Bradbury's only consolation is that many residents of Monterey must be leading cleaner lives, and he is firmly convinced that his sale is really a "clean sweep."

Woman's Club Section Discusses Munitions

At the meeting of the Woman's Club current events section Wednesday morning at Pine Inn, Mrs. Lawrence M. Knox, the chairman, scanned the munitions situation in relation to world war or peace. Not as criminals, but as the victims of a system—the highly organized, competitive sale of arms since the time of the French revolution—the munitions makers, she showed, have a definite part both in starting and in continuing wars.

Meanwhile, the United States, like other nations, continues with the immediate task of developing machinery capable of withstanding the forces making for wars. Neutrality legislation passed by the last Congress, did not foresee, and did not provide for, the contingency of civil war. The Spanish situation, therefore, caught this nation unprepared with legislation to indicate what stand should be taken in the matter of shipping arms to one or both sides. The current Congress slapped an embargo on all shipments of war materials to Spain, but not in time to prevent some highly profitable transactions for which arrangements had already been made. President Roosevelt has asked for a bill giving him broader powers to deal with suddenly developing and unforeseen contingencies. Plenty of other measures have been proposed; bills to take the profits out of war by limiting the amount of income which businesses and individuals may make through war contracts; bills to mobilize not only the manpower of the nation in event of war, but industry as well.

Using the last great war as an example, Mrs. Knox sketched from such sources as Walter Mills' "Road to War," and Engelbrecht and Hennegan's "Merchants of Death" the far-flung, interlocking activities of the munitions makers, leading to such paradoxes as men being killed by guns in the hands of the enemy, but manufactured in their own country; military manouvers, which, by orders from the real sources of power within the country, carefully spared munitions factories, arms depots, and sources of the raw materials of war from destruction by air raids. A realistic manner of conducting the war to win, she showed, could have brought it to a quick close. A well placed bomb on the GHQ of one side or the other, or on the great munitions depositories, would have brought an end to hostilities in short order—if that had been the object. But maps indicating military tactics showed "protected" areas in the enemy territory; the sources of the arms of war.

A few highlights from Mrs. Knox' talk: Woodrow Wilson's remark to Tumulty, the night of the declaration of war on Germany, as he gazed out on the excited, jubilant crowds in the Washington streets: "My message today was a message of death to our young men. How strange to applaud it." . . . When Germany invaded Belgium, her soldiers faced guns made in their own country, Germany had armed Belgium . . . More French pacifists were shot during the war than all the Frenchmen killed in the French revolution . . . After the war there were 21,000 new millionaires in the United States . . . 1916 was the most prosperous year in U. S. history . . . wherever there was "peace talk", stocks dropped from five to 40 per cent.

The next meeting of the current events section will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 9, rather than on the regular Wednesday, as Mrs. Knox will be out of town on the regular meeting day.

Christian Science

In all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., a Lesson-Sermon will be read Sunday, Jan. 31, on the subject "Love."

The Golden Text will be: "The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing" (Zeph. 3: 17). Bible selections will include the following passage from I John 4: 7, 8: "Beloved let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included, which reads as follows: "Mortals believe in a finite personal God; while God is infinite Love, which must be unlimited" (p. 312).

Warning Issued on Dog Ailment

A warning that it should keep a close lookout for hydatid disease, a serious affliction of both man and animals, has been given the medical fraternity of California by Dr. T. F. Ryan, distinguished Australian medical practitioner, who has just completed an extended visit to Honolulu and California. The disease, although it yields readily to control measures, is widespread in a number of the sheep-raising areas of Australia, South America and South Africa and at other points throughout the world, and a few occurrences have been reported in the United States.

The widening scope of travel and transportation and the fact that the climate of California is favorable for the introduction and spread of the disease are factors that need particular attention, Dr. Ryan said. Thus far the disease seems to have fastened on dogs, sheep and humans as the favored hosts, and children are particularly susceptible. Its initial incidence is in the form of a small tapeworm which normally inhabits the small intestine of the dog. The terminal may contain from 500 to 800 eggs, which are voided by the dog and transferred to sheep or humans through water or otherwise. Fondling and petting the dog without a thorough cleansing can transmit the disease. The eating of unwashed raw vegetables is another source of transmission. In the regions where the disease is prevalent the registration of dogs and the destruction of stray and ownerless canines has materially assisted control.

Helen Vye Will Visit Old Home In France

Leaving Carmel some time in the near future is Helen Vye, who has sold her interest in the Irene Lucien Shop to Mrs. Maude Jenkinson, a part-time Carmel resident for the last four or five years. Mrs. Vye is planning to return to her home in France, where she will remain for some months before coming back to Carmel. Mrs. Jenkinson will go into partnership with Edith Smythe, Mrs. Vye's former partner.

Deadline Near for Auto Plates

Motorists who have not received their postal cards showing the fees they must pay to secure 1937 license plates, should wait no longer before applying, as the fees may be determined without the Post Card at any plate issuing office, Howard E. Deems, Registrar of Vehicles, said today.

"With the renewal deadline fixed at midnight on Feb. 4," Deems said, "those who have not obtained their 1937 plates are advised to take their 1936 Registration Slips immediately to the nearest issuing office to avoid the one hundred per cent penalty that will become effective after that date."

Due to the establishment of 14 temporary branch offices and to the fact that all offices are open on Saturday afternoon during the renewal, plates can be obtained now with little or no delay," he declared.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Kingsland are visiting for a month in Santa Barbara.

Freak Fish Found on Beach Sands

Found on the beach last Saturday, one of the strangest fishes to make its appearance here in many years has caused much speculation and excitement among those who saw it before wind and weather did away with it. The monstrosity was about three feet long, shaped like an orthodox fish but with a body seemingly made of leather, a huge tail, two huge eyes, a head which apparently could be withdrawn into the body, and tentacles dangling from where its nose would be. The head was separated from the outer shell of its body, and apparently controlled from within independently.

A picture of the queer bit of sea life was taken by Miss Belle Heller of Beverley Hills, one of the first to see it. Her picture of the fish is now at The Pine Cone office, and both Miss Heller and The Pine Cone would be much happier if someone would identify the thing.

Mrs. Kay Russell of King City is a guest at Carmel Inn.

"The Fool" On the Way

* * * * * * * *

Church To Benefit From Feb. 12 Play

By means of strenuous rehearsals and much burning of the midnight oil, the play "The Fool", to be presented Feb. 12, at Sunset Auditorium is shaping into a fine production. This great Channing Pollock play is sponsored jointly by Community church and the dramatic seminar of the adult education department of Monterey Union High School, and Clay Otto is directing it.

Though written nearly 20 years ago, the play is particularly timely. A story in the daily news not long ago sketched the outlines of the same dramatic situation; a young clergyman leaving his fashionable church and rebuking the wealthy members of his congregation for their lack of social-mindedness.

While making a strong plea for better relationships of society with labor, the play also states the best of the case for the capitalist system, through the person of Mr. Goodkind, who in the play represents enlightened capitalism. He believes, and states effectively, that the man with the brains, who plans and organizes a business, is entitled to a greater share of the returns from that business, and in his right to "reward the man who works and fire the man who doesn't". He is also flexible enough to believe that some of the "new-fangled" ideas of the young clergyman are good because they work, resulting in not only better pay for the men, a smoother relationship between the men and their bosses, but also in bigger profits for the business.

In contrast to the enlightened capitalist, Goodkind, are Benfield and the rich, frivilous and thoughtless women of the church, who are interested only in their own comfort, have no feeling of social responsibility, and feel that the desire of the workers for something more than bare subsistance is a blow at their security.

The play has many dramatic moments, coming to a climax in a scene showing a miraculous cure achieved through faith and love.

Among the players in the large and able cast are:

William Shepherd, Elizabeth Todd, B. F. Dixon, Ross C. Miller, Frank Townsend, Suzanne Hedger, Zahrah Lee Koepp, Harry Hedger, Arthur Hull, Jerome Chance, E. A. H. Watson, Thelma B. Miller, Myrtle Stoddard, Ethel Warren, Sammy Sierka, Guy Koepp, and others.

Lightweight Team Wins Championship

Sunset schoos lightweight basketball team won the Monterey peninsula championship title last Friday by defeating the fast Seaside five by a score of 18 to 4. This game, played at New Monterey, was the last of the season, and marks six consecutive victories for the Sunset quints. Sunset had a well balanced, hard fighting team and showed fine team work in all the games. The team was coached by Arthur Hull, of the Sunset teaching staff.

The lineup for Friday's battle consisted of Irving Parker, center; Geo. De Amaral and Donald Berry, forwards; Bob Frolli and George Gossler, guards. Jones and Coffin, of the first string, were on the sick list, but Gossler and Berry substituted: Others who saw action during the season were Dick Williams, Monty Stearns, and Gerald Ray.

Most of these boys will graduate to Monterey high school next June, but it is believed that another hard and strong team will develop for Carmel Sunset lightweights from the boys now in the midget class. The foods class gave a dinner for the team Wednesday.

Sunset's lightweight team has made an excellent record and will be awarded the pennant, in the near future. Parker, Jones, Frolli, Coffin, De Amaral, Gossler, and Berry will each receive a Block "S".

Bacon Orchestra Plays for Mills

Ernst Bacon's Federal Music Project orchestra of San Francisco is to give a concert at Mills College next Wednesday evening, Feb. 3. Mr. Bacon will conduct and the solo cellist will be Analee Camp. The program will be given in the hall for chamber music and will include two groups. In the first group are the Schubert-Liszt March in B Minor; Wagner's Siegfried Idyl; and Francesca da Rimini by Tschaikowsky. The second group includes Ernest Bloch's Schelomo and Elegie by Faure, the former for cello and piano; the latter for cello and orchestra. In conclusion the orchestra will play Ernst Bacon's "Country Roads—Unpaved".

Miss Camp is a Mills graduate, in the class of 1935. She won both the major musical prizes at her graduation, receiving the Elizabeth Mills Crothers prize and the Maurethea Friedberger cup.

John McKay, former owner of Vining's market, but now living in Oakland, is visiting in Carmel.

Filmarte To Reopen

Richard Bare To Manage Cinema House

Darkness will no longer greet the movie-seeker who walks down Monte Verde street in quest of an evening's entertainment. The Filmart is to be reopened.

Down there right now the new Filmart management headed by Richard Bare is busy cleaning, shining, sweeping, and in general preparing for what they believe will be a "real opening" in spite of the fact that the Filmart Theater has been dark only a little over a month.

A new system of booking has been hit upon, whereby only the finest of film attractions will be booked into the theater, according to manager Bare.

Fewer pictures will be played each year. Each picture will be given an extended run. The cream of the crop will be shown, and the "quantity" pictures eliminated, thus bringing to the Filmart screen only pictures worthy of exhibition to an area composed of highly critical and appreciative theater-goers.

Announced today as the first attraction to play the Filmart Theater starting Feb. 5 for one full week, is the Alexander Korda production "Rembrandt," starring Charles Laughton, who protrays the famous Dutch painter, Rembrandt Van Rijn. In this film Laughton is said to achieve a truly striking resemblance to the greatest artist the world has ever known.

Preparatory to the opening next Friday evening, new comfortable loge chairs are being installed, with improved vision and facilities for those who care to smoke. New sharp focus projection lenses, a general re-arrangement of the stage, and drapes plus a re-directed group of speaker-horns will add to the pleasure of Filmart first-nighters.

Continuance of the Filmart will be welcomed by the many Carmel and peninsula people who voiced disappointment upon the closing some time ago.

Library Shelves Need Tuneful Scores

By CAMILLA DANIELS

CARMEL'S public library, excellent in so many respects, needs more good music scores.

Our village has in recent years enjoyed an unusual musical activity, due partly to the work of musicians who have made it their home, partly to the fine concert series given every year. The number of serious music students has steadily increased. The Community Orchestra has revived latent interest in amateur musicians. The summer festivals have established their own tradition. In brief, the library is serving a public which has shown a vital and participating interest in good music.

And what have we? A number of song collections for children, of music tutors for very young piano students, a fine collection of folk-songs (lent from the county), popular music of a bygone day, and light,—very light classics! Which is all splendid. But of music substantially classic, upstairs and down, listed and unlisted, there are less than 40 items distributed among 16 composers. Beethoven ranks high among the illustrious B's, with four listings, Bach has two, Brahms none. For a stringed instrument there is apparently no music of any kind.

Where are the song collections of Schubert? Or one good oratorio or cantata? Where are the Hayden, the Brahms Quartets? The "Inventions" and Fugues of Bach? One good concerto for any instrument? Where is there so much as a whisper from a notable composer of our own day—Sibelius, Stravinsky, Ravel?

We have an idea where. For Carmel is a place where people find themselves transferred overnight into new professions. Swords are turned into plough shares, plough shares into easels, evening gowns into overalls, and vice versa. And in the metamorphosis we believe, we know—that much fine music has been stowed away in darkness. We know it, for there is some even on our shelves!

We believe, with others, that a community in so many respects well served by its library will welcome an opportunity to cooperate in overcoming a lack which only a richly endowed institution could have met in course of routine. The list of musical biographies in the library is fairly large, but scores for voice, for chorus, for any instrument or group of instruments, by any good composer, are needed to give our community library an adequate music department.

Such scores will be welcomed at the library. If some pages are a bit worn, they are not hopeless. There is more than one way of getting them mended and bound for use.

So please take down your music from the shelf and look it over. Even what you give to the library is not lost,—you can borrow it back as often as you will. And if the thought of parting brings a pang, that means the music is good, and the Library really needs it. Hoarded music, like hoarded gold, loses interest.

Ocean Parking Strip Initiated

Car owners need no longer worry about the state of their fenders and front bumpers, nature lovers need no longer fret about the condition of trees in at least one block of Ocean avenue, and the street department is this week viewing with pride one of its accomplishments.

Cause of the general happiness is the finishing this week of improvement work on the center parking strip between Dolores and Lincoln. The old line of rocks was torn out and replaced with a double row of stones, cemented together and filled with dirt, which will be planted later with small bushes and flowers. Parking spaces on both sides of the street have been blocked off for the last week while the cement hardened and set and a layer of earth and oil was applied. The barrier was lowered Tuesday afternoon, and immediately a large group of cars rushed in to try their new resting place. Next on the list is the block between Lincoln and Monte Verde, which will be treated in the same manner.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Harrison and Miss Caroline Harrison of San Francisco were at Pine Inn for the week end.

"Gay Nineties" Fashion Show

Preparations have been made to entertain over 100 guests at the bridge tea and "gay nineties" fashion show to be given tomorrow afternoon at Holman's solarium by the Monterey Peninsula branch of A. A. U. W. The affair is a benefit for the fellowship fund of the national A. A. U. W., and bids fair to be one of the most attractive social events of the season as well. The bridge feature of the afternoon will begin at 2 o'clock, and there will be no less than 25 tables. The game will end at 4 o'clock, and then will begin the unique fashion show; heirloom dresses loaned by their owners, and to be modeled by high school girls. Tea will be served. Mrs. Harold Youngman is chairman of the committee arranging the affair, and Mrs. Webster Street is her assistant in Carmel.

Hobbies Subject for Group Talks

Organization of the first group growing out of last week's psychiatric mission of Dr. Cody L. Marsh has already been started by Mrs. John L. Fitch, who has invited women over 50—or those expecting to be 50—to meet with her in the assembly room of Pine Inn tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, for the discussion of "Hobbies", and for group organization of those interested in the same hobby. There will be no fees.

Mrs. Nelson French, 391 Ocean View avenue, Pacific Grove, has graciously invited any of the above group who are interested in learning practicing or improving expert needlework, crocheting or knitting, to meet at her home Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 3, at 3 o'clock, and thereafter twice a month if they so desire for instruction and suggestions.

Monte Carlo Ballet at San Jose Monday

The Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, of Col. W. de Basil, which the Denny-Watrous Management is presenting in San Jose in the Civic Auditorium on Monday evening, Feb. 1, brings with it its complete company of 125, including all the lovely ballerinas who have charmed European captials, the leading male dancers, and a symphony orchestra of 25. Leonide Massine, maitre de ballet and greatest of all Russian male dancers, David Lichine, Yurek Shabelevsky, Tamara Toumanova, Irinia Baronova, Tatiana Riabouchinska, Alexandra Danilova, make the principals, all famous throughout the world.

The San Jose program includes what are probably three of the most popular and spectacular of all the ballets of the Ballet Russe entire repertoire: "Les Sylphides", "Aurora's Wedding", and "Prince Igor".

"Les Sylphides" was for 25 years Diaghileff's favorite ballet. it is danced to the music of Chopin's valses, mazurkas and preludes. It brings in all the ballerinas of the company. It is a gem of pure beauty, and connoisseurs of the ballet have declared its beauty to be imperishable. Tamara Toumanova is especially lovely in "Les Sylphides".

"Aurora's Wedding" contains some of the most brilliant dancing of all the ballet repertoire. David Lichine as the Blue Bird does some of the most difficult of dancing, and Tatiana Riabouchinska in the same number leaves an impression never to be forgotten. The ballet is spectacular and colorful in contrast to the white classicism of "Les Sylphides". The complete company appear in it. Tschaikowsky's music of "The Sleeping Princess" is used, on which the ballet is based.

"Prince Igor" is wild and barbaric, to Borodine's music of the opera of the same name. Yurek Shabelevsky and David Lichine and the male dancers are given especial opportunity in this ballet, which ends with leaps and head spins and a tossing of swords to a terrific crescendo of music that is most startling and thrilling. The ballet depicts warriors resting after the day's battle before their rude tents. Luscious Oriental beauties dance before them. Incited by the music and dance, the warriors leap into the air one by one, whirling the maidens with them, until the stage is a wild abandon of barbaric dance. Nicholas Roerich did the settings and costumes of "Prince Igor".

Forum to Hear Dr. Paul Cadman

The next meeting of Carmel Forum will be held next Thursday evening, Feb. 4, at 8 o'clock at Sunset auditorium. The topic will be "The Present Financial Situation, National and International", and the speaker will be Dr. Paul Cadman. Dr. Cadman was formerly of the faculty of the University of California, in the department of economics. He has been a favorite speaker with forum groups all over the state for many years. At present he has offices in San Francisco, where he practises as a consulting economist and is engaged in economic research.

Carmel Forum, organized about two years ago at the request of a group of Carmelites who desired this assistance in keeping abreast of rapidly-changing world and national affairs, is conducted by the adult education department of Monterey Union high school, of which L. E. Wormley is director. There is no admission charge, and the meeting is open to the public. It provides an excellent opportunity for the mentally alert to hear good speakers on a wide variety of timely topics.

$50 VERSE PRIZE

Crown Publishers, Tribune building, New York City, announce $50 in cash prizes for additional verse submitted to their annual volume, Crown Anthology of Verse.

Although original, unpublished poems are preferred, authors may submit reprints. There are no restrictions as to theme or style. Individual poems are limited to 32 lines. Contest closes April 1, 1937. Contributors are not obligated to purchase copies.

Blue Bird Tea Room to Expand

The Blue Bird tea room, long one of Carmel's better known eating places, has felt the need for more room in which to serve its customers. According to Mrs. M. C. Sampson, owner, a new banquet room will be opened soon in the Wilson building on the corner of Ocean avenue and Monte Verde, recently purchased by Malcolm Macbeth through the Gladys R. Johnston office, who will begin extensive remodeling soon. The room will be in the back of the building with an entrance from the Golden Bough court, and will be used for large dinners, private parties and banquets. There will be accommodations for 50 diners. The room will open on or about Feb. 25, with a large tea.

REACTIONS OF READERS

SUMMER MUSIC

Editor; The Pine Cone:—

The impending summer's music season impels me to suggest:

It appears the directors of musical enterprise for Carmelites have been guided by the outworn tradition of music for musicians? The use of good examples in music with which all musicians should be familiar. This produces the same effect as say, in the art of poesy, the constant use in public of traditional examples of iambic or trochaic measures would.

Since the entire population are not musicians— and since the arts are so closely allied, could there not be devised a method of producing for the sake of interest and learning examples of music for the other artists, poets, etc. Music for that greatest of artists, the observer who hears, sees, seeks and appreciates. Music for the dancer who might develop the art Maud Allen caught glimpses of in transposing, no matter how vainly, the poetry of listening into motion.

There is no fault found with the choice of quality in the past. It is that the object itself has been lost in a maze of tradition.

If this idea can be sold I may again, at the end of a musical season, sit at a cozy bar, read the immortal "Seven Valleys" and sip a daiquiri in content.

HASCLE M. CORNBLETH.
362 South Broadway
Los Angeles.

Dear Mr. Corubleth: We think you have a fine idea, and we suggest that since it is your idea, you are the one who should come forward and "devise the method" of which you speak. It generally works better for the person who originates an idea to carry it out than to expect someone else to do it, for after all he is the one who sees the vision, n'est-ce pas?

Not that we entirely agree with you that the summer music season, by which we assume you mean the Bach Festival, is strictly "music for musicians". We have too many plain garden variety of music lovers, not musicians by any mean, of whom we happen to be one, exalted by the Bach Festival as by a profound spiritual experience. The proof of the pudding is in the eating, and from the way people flock to the Bach concerts, and from the way they respond with a visible emanation of elation and happiness, it is obvious that the Bach concerts are giving them something for which they are hungry. It is not necessarily because it is Bach — though we happen to like Bach, and have welcomed this chance to hear music which otherwise we would probably never have heard — but that it is community music-making, something that is shared by a large number of people. We have not been conscious of any "outworn tradition", because to so many of us it has all been vital and new. So as we say, if you have something to offer in addition, we think it will be swell and we will lap it all up and help you all we can. —The Editor.

CAUSE OF WAR

Editor; The Carmel Pine Cone:

In your editorial under the caption, MOMENTOUS HAPPENINGS, about a talk on reciprocal trade agreements, you bemoan that "only 70 people were interested enough to want to hear about the trade treaties. Yet on this and other questions of our international policy may turn the question of whether or not this nation may again be plunged into a great war."

Perhaps they do not number 70, but there are a number of people in Carmel who are convinced that trade treaties do more to engender war than they do to prevent war.

In our day, wars are caused solely by economic conditions which are brought about by the endeavor of every country to export its products, many of which are sold in competition with the domestic products of the country into which the exports were shipped.

A great deal of the endeavor to export so-called surpluses will be entirely unnecessary when the people of each country have sufficient purchasing power to buy all they want of what their own country can produce and when time comes, the exports of a country will only be sufficent to pay for what a country has to import due to its inability to produce or grow such imports.

That curious impossibility, "a favorable balance of trade", where every country tries to export more than it imports, will probably prove to be the real cause of our next war.

With every country trying to export, any and everything it can, it is foolish for any country to talk of the necessity of having "sources of supply." The present difficulty is to find the means of payment for what a country wants to buy from another country.

Douglas Prepares for Spring Term

Changes and additions to the program are being made at Douglas school, and new boarders and day students are registering in preparation for the new term, which begins next Monday, Feb. 1.

Miss Katherine Carey will assist with the library work of the elementary school and will devote some time to remedial reading. She is well qualified in this field, and was formerly principal of a Winnetka school. Mme. Albanese will have a period of French conversation at her table each noon for the senior girls. Mrs. Gentry will have charge of the public speaking group and the assemblies for the coming semester.

A cello recital was given by Charles Frisbie at the last school assembly, and the art classes were taken to visit Carmel Art gallery recently by George Seideneck, the art instructor. Bishop Cooper of Korea, who has been visiting the T. W. Van Ess family visited the study hall recently, and alternately entertained and questioned the students.

A new version of archery has been created by Dick Collins during the rainy weather. Bows and arrows have been taken on hiking trips.

WHO can measure the devotion that is the expression of a loving heart? What can measure the sincerity of a service which does everything in its power to express that devotion? We believe that our superior funeral direction must succeed in expressing such devotion and at the same time must be kept within the means of all.

Psychiatric Mission Conducted by Dr. L. Cody Marsh Leaves Enriching Influences

BY THELMA B. MILLER

In two open lectures and six group conferences, Dr. L. Cody Marsh of San Francisco came into contact with several hundred peninsula people last week-end, and the experience was mutually enriching. If his audiences were vitally stimulated by Dr. Marsh, Dr. Marsh was also flattering in his delight at the eager and intelligent response of the Carmelites and the people who came over from Monterey, Pacific Grove and the Presidio to pay him the compliment of absorbed attention. They returned and returned again, with no urging after the initial session at Sunset auditorium Friday evening. Those who attended all eight of the lectures; three at Pine Inn Saturday afternoon, three more at the same place Sunday afternoon, and the final one at Community church Sunday night, saw a complete pattern in the whole mission. They also saw that the problems of one age or sex group are essentially the problems of all the others.

There were white heads at the session for the adolescents. There were fresh young faces at the session for the men and women over 50, as they prepared in advance to cope with a time of life they have not yet reached. Married women were as interested as single women in what he had to say to the latter. A few women stuck wistful noses in the door at the business men's session, but the gentlemen, more bashful than the high school boys and girls, who talked freely despite the grown-ups in their audience, preferred to be alone while they discussed the aftermaths, within themselves, of the depression, and how to adapt themselves for a constructive part in the new day that is dawning. The last two sessions Sunday afternoon were for parents and married couples, and virtually the same group attended both. Childless married people saw much in the technique of child guidance that they could apply to themselves in their everyday contacts. For Dr. Marsh carried one theme straight through his lectures: that there are no mystic barriers separating people into tight little categories. They are all human beings, with the same necessity to face life courageously and with an adult attitude.

Dr. Marsh reversed the order of the two general lectures, and at Sunset school Friday night discussed "A Disarmament Conference of the Human Heart". He developed the theme that the causes of war are latent in the human heart; if that were not true, neither munitions manufacturers, directors nor imperialist ambitions could start wars or get people to fight in them. The same theme, stated in a different way, is to be found in many religious teachings. Dr. Marsh made no attempt to claim that his propounding this theory would instantly cause all wars to stop, but an understanding of the primary cause;— unresolved personal hatreds, resentments against conditions and people affecting the past life of individuals— is the first step toward changing human nature and eliminating the causes of war. The psychiatrist is inclined to believe that hatred is a more potent destructive factor, to individual and society, than fear.

Dr. Marsh did not attempt to tell people how to rid themselves of hatred and substitute for it brotherly love, or "good will", as he prefers to call it. His technique is to arouse in people a desire for a better type of life, letting that stimulate them to a discovery of the methods. The methods are in most cases simple and close at hand, but will never be discovered, nor can they be taught, until there is a genuine willingness to learn.

After a general discussion of the phsyiology and psychology of adolescence, demonstration and analysis of physical characteristics of young people, Dr. Marsh invited the teen-age group to tell what they consider is "the matter" with the older generation. The responses fell into a general pattern of desire to be treated, not like children, but like grown people. After listening to a series of indictments— "They make too many rules" . . . "They talk to us as if we were still children. . . . They invite us to meet their friends and then make ourselves scarce, so we don't really get to know them . . . they worry too much about us . . . they won't let us choose our clothes or our friends. . ." One fine young fellow got up and said that after all, they had to consider matters from the parents' point of view too; maybe the children weren't always all they should be!

To men and women over 50 Dr. Marsh spoke of the "terrific lag between the aged and modern life". He urged them to "grow friendly" with the normal physical changes following middle life; not to try to present a fictitious appearance of youth. He reminded them that the senses grow duller, that certain dietary changes are necessary; urged them to "throw out tentacles" of contact with their contemporaries, instead of withdrawing from life or seeking to associate only with younger people. Older people tend to be arbitrary,— to live too much in the past, to give way to depression and anxiety and a sense of neglect. The "tentacles" of new interests help to ward off all these states. He suggested touches of color in dress, to counteract the effect of an "ashy" complexion; that there are dances old people can do without injury— but not the dances of the young people— that older people may write and present plays and in other ways develop a group life of their own.

Dr. Marsh was deeply sympathetic to the problems of the single woman, the modern, competant "bachelor girl" who scares men away — largely because the men have never weaned from their mothers. They are afraid of being dominated by these able women, who stand so successfully on their own feet, and so seek the ultra-feminine woman who builds in them a sense of their own superiority. The answer for the single woman is to cultivate the feminine graces, based on a sincere interest in other people and the ability to express affection and good will. Men and women are essentially the same, he stressed. One sex craves love and admiration as much as the other, and is as grateful for receiving it.

Some of these same principles carried over into the discussion of a harmonious married life; that both sexes remember to practise at home the little graces which they use so effectively in the outer world. He demonstrated that many husbands and wives are essentially children in their attitude toward each other, and by the same token, toward their own children. "Speak to the man in your son," he said, "and the man will answer you. Treat him like a child, and he will remain a child, even until his hair is white". He invited married couples to send to him "scenarios" of their family rows, or even to react them for their own benefit, with all the original vim, and then to rewrite the playlet as it should be played by a pair of intelligent adults.

At Community church Sunday night Dr. Marsh discussed "The Seven Marks of Maturity", which are also the "seven cardinal virtues" as a psychiatrist sees them. On a table before him was a seven-branched candle-stick, and as he discussed each virtue he lit one candle.

"This is the psychiatrist", he said, holding up a lighted match. "This candle is you. If I can light this candle within you, I will not have passed this way in vain."

The first virtue he named as "thrift"; another word for good work habits and a well-directed ambition to rise in the world. The opposite "vice" he said, is "persistant poverty", which some families adopt — unconsciously — as a pattern. This is not to be confused with the occasional adversity which may upset the best of planning.

Happiness is the second virtue. Dr. Marsh did not tell his audience how to be happy, but gave them the challenge that the causes of happiness are internal, not external, and can be developed. "Articulatecy" was his coined word for the third virtue; the ability to express, not only through words, but through the whole life-pattern.

Emotional agility, which more pedantic pschologists describe as "the appropriate response to emotional stimuli" was presented as another mark of maturity; a flexiblity which makes the individual broadly responsive rather than rigid and limited. The "cardinal sin" opposed to the fifth virtue, intelligence, is "wilfull ignorance", a failure to take advantage of opportunities to learn. "Wisdom" rather than "information" is the goal to be sought in this case.

Health is another positive virtue which can be acquired unless the individual prefers the "cardinal sin" of being always ailing, of using his aches and pains to dominate. Last and greatest of the virtues, of the marks of maturity, was the quality of being loveable, which comes, he said, from loving much, founded on an attitude of interest in and good will toward others. The lecture ended on this simple and spiritual note, and the seven lighted candles illuminated Dr. Marsh's own calm, cheerful, spiritual face, which is the best possible proof that what he preaches is "good medicine".

Rev. Homer S. Bodley, who presided at the closing meeting, made a sympathetic introduction in which he commented on Dr. Marsh's spiritual approach to his subject, and pointed out that Jesus was a psychiatrist who established the "disarmament conference" in the hearts of those who followed him. Dr. Marsh, in an academic and scholastic way of approach, has much the same taching to impart as have the clergy.

Study Groups Are Proposed to Carry On Marsh Teachings

As a result of the psychiatric mission of Dr. L. Cody Marsh last weekend, there has been a spontaneous expression of desire to develop study groups along lines suggested by Dr. Marsh's lectures. In order to discuss ways and means and to develop the mechanics of these groups, a meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross C. Miller, on Torres between Mountain View and Eighth, Sunday afternoon at 2:30. It is particularly for those who will be willing to assume leadership in forming the groups, but anyone who is interested is cordially invited to attend. A number of constructive suggestions have been made, and a central council may be formed to make it possible for the groups to function effectively.

Club Holds Gay Party

Mission Ranch Scene of Festivities

THE biggest and gayest party Carmelites have attended in many a moon marked the opening festivities at Mission Ranch club last Saturday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Willis J. Walker and Lloyd Tevis invited several hundred guests in to see the result of their labors in transforming the historic old ranch—birthplace of Carmel Martin—into a country club with facilities for a wide variety of sports.

The old white barn proved all that could be desired as a dance hall, bringing reminiscences of many a country dance. It has a fine hardwood floor, and aside from a few slight decorative touches, has been left just as it was when Carmel Martin used to play on the haystacks and chase the cows under its gracious, sloping roof. There are orange hangings at the windows now, and the overhead lights are shaded by white lanterns, each with a gay orange bow, and everything is as clean and shining as white paint can make it. Tables and benches along the walls gave people a place to chat and relax between dances. It was a real Carmel get-together, for the Carmel element predominated, although there were also many from over the hill and a few San Francisco guests.

At midnight additional tables were brought in, and a lavish spread was served, buffet style. There were three or four kinds of salad, delicious baked beans, pastries and coffee, and presently the contented murmur of well-fed people filled the hall like the drowsy buzzing of bees on a summer day. After supper there was dancing for several hours more—altogether a good party, and one long to be remembered. The music was by Allen Knight and his merry band.

Among Carmelites invited to the party were: Messrs. and Mesdames: George P. Rapp, L. Jorgenson, C. G. Lawrence, Alfred Matthews, Arthur C. Webb, Irving Williams, Fielding T. Robeson, R. N. Newman, James O. Greenan, G. H. Burnette, Ernest Bixler, Otto W. Bardarson, De Witt Blamer, W. B. Swain, John F. Todd, J. L. Hughes, L. K. Gentry, Martin Flavin, Lloyd Weer, R. E. Announcing: "The Winner"

Carmel residents are naturally interested in dogs, so here is a little story which might prove entertaining to some.

There was a dog show held recently in San Francisco at the Civic Auditorium, and canine blue bloods from far and near gathered to compete for the cups, ribbons, and honorable mentions prized so dearly by their owners. Large dogs, small dogs, thin dogs, fat dogs, dogs of every size and shape — all paraded before the judges and the public in true dog show style, but the climax came when the contest for the best brace of dogs began. A brace of dogs is two dogs of the same breed on a double leash, the best looking pair to win. On the other end of the leash is the owner or trainer of the dogs. The contestants were lined up ready to enter the arena to be judged. One of the owners, tired of waiting, unfolded a San Francisco newspaper and began reading. Imagine his surprise, and that of all the other owners, when a picture on one of the pages came into view. It was a picture of the winner of the contest which had not yet begun! A proud pair of English setters and their equally proud owner (who woudn't be proud, winning an event before it starts) basked smilingly in the warm glow of a smile of approval from the judge who, a few minutes later, was to judge the show. It's not hard to imagine who the two most embarassed men at the show were, and even the dogs are reported to have hung their tails in shame.

Jimmy Hopper's Guide Soon Will Be Ready

Several publications in the American Guide series, produced by the Federal Writers' Projects of the WPA will appear in the near future. They will be in the form of booklets, handsomely illustrated with a profusion of maps and photographs, and will make available to all American tourists descriptions of many of the main transcontinental highways, both east-west, and north-south.

The route descriptions given in these booklets will be identical with those of the American Guide itself, to be issued later in six volumes of half a million words each. The American Guide series of booklets, to be sold at a popular price, is eagerly awaited by all the agencies serving the $5,000,000,000 tourist industry in America, as well as by the tourists themselves.

According to James Hopper, Carmelite and California state director of the Federal Writers' Projects, the California project is rushing to completion all the California state links in the transcontinental highways to be described in the guide booklets.

Miss C. Macdowell and her sister, of Vancouver Island, have taken a house here for a month.

Book Section Will Meet Next Wednesday

The book section of the Woman's club will hold its first February program next Wednesday morning at Pine Inn at 10:30. The program will consist of brief reviews by members of books they have read and particularly enjoyed recently, beginning with a brief review by the chairman, Mrs. Ross C. Miller.

The garden section will also held its first meeting of the month next week, on Thursday at 10 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Abbie McDow, 555 Monte Verde. Mrs. E. J. Sherwin is the new chairman of the section.

Abdication and Baldwin

"Saviour of Empire" May Lose Grip

Carmel friends of Chandler Bragdon, University of California Extension instructor, have been interested in following his recent pronouncements regarding the political situation in England.

According to Professor Bragdon, Stanley Balwdin, British premier, may topple from his present position as "Savior of the Empire," when the English people have time for sober second thought.

"In the recent constitutional crisis," he says, "Baldwin used the argument that for Edward VIII to marry the woman of his choice would be impossible under constitutional procedure. But in the past particularly in the Great War period, England has prided herself on her ability to make adjustments to changing conditions. Time and time again, important departures from the tradition of the past have been made—and England has weathered the storm.

Mr. Baldwin did not doubt, evidently, that the majority of the people in the British Isles and the Dominions would support him in his struggle with the King. His close alliance with the leaders of the Church of England, and the amazing blandness of his speech in the House of Commons immediately after the abdication, lead some to suspect that the recent events in England were "managed" by the Prime Minister and not the result of royal romance or tragic fate.

Now that the English people, stunned by the magnitude of the crisis and the suddenness of its development before their eyes, are coming to look upon the events of December with detachment, sympathy for Edward VIII seems to be growing. At the same time Balwin's expressed conviction that he was defending the sacred temple of the Empire from a self-willed monarch, does not seem to carry the weight that it did in the heat of the crisis."

Mrs. Vere Dickinson spent the week end in San Francisco.

Capt. Robison Elected President of Carmel Business Association

CAPT. J. Shelburn Robison was elected president of the Carmel Business Association Tuesday night when the annual election was held in Pine Inn, Capt. Robison succeeds Harold Nielsen, who has been the chief executive for the past year. Victor Graham was elected vice president and Helen McLachlan was chosen secretary and treasurer. Directors of the organization are to be announced by Capt. Robison later.

The association rejected the proposition which would call for an expenditure of $150 to join Monterey and Pacific Grove in printing exploitation pamphlets about the peninsula to be distributed to tourists. Majority of the members believed that Carmel could better advertise its advantages through its own efforts. Eugene Watson called attention to the excellent advertising Carmel has secured through cultural activities here and through booklets which the association had printed. Following a vote on the proposition at the suggestion of Ranald Cockburn, the retiring president, Harold Nielsen, appointed Conrad Imelman, Henry Overin, Eugene Watson and Ross C. Miller a committee to study Carmel's advertising problems and report back on how best to advertise Carmel.

Frank Townsend, as member of Carmel Sanitary Board, and Bernard Rowntree, secretary, at the request of the association, explained reasons for the delay in providing an adequate sanitary disposal system for Carmel. Mr. Townsend reviewed the history of the board's activities to date, and Mr. Rowntree explained the need for an "enabling act" which must pass the legislature before any bond issue could be legal. Such an act is now before the legislature and will probably be passed when the solons reconvene after their present recess.

Paul Mercurio praised the new parking strip on Ocean avenue between Dolores and Lincoln and a vote of approval of the project was given Street Commissioner James Thoburn and he was urged to continue the work in the other blocks on Ocean.

H. Noel Deutsch, district manager for Home Owned Businesses of California, told the business men what his organization is doing to help preserve independent business in California. Problems facing the independents are to be solved through education and legislation and an expansion program along these lines is now being carried out. During the past year the organization has been successful in getting removed from the high schools propaganda in text books which favored the chain stores. A bill is being prepared for legislative action which would make it illegal for any man to own more than one store of a kind. Such a bill is now before the Florida legislature.

At the conclusion of the business association meeting upon suggestion of E. H. Ewig the members gave a rising vote of thanks to the retiring officers.

Mrs. Grant to Present Program

Mrs. Margaret F. Grant, outstanding Carmel book reviewer, will present the program for the monthly meeting of the Woman's club next Monday afternoon. This is the annual program sponsored by the club's book section. The program, at 2:30 in Pine Inn assembly room, will follow the club's midwinter luncheon, to be held at 1 o'clock in the diningroom at Pine Inn. Club members may bring guests, and reservations will close tomorrow. Reservations may be made by phoning to Pine Inn, to Mrs. W. E. Heathorne, 757 WX, or to Mrs. Joseph G. Hooper, 117.

Mrs. Grant, whose specialty is historical characters, has chosen for her review the fine new biography, "St. Joan of Arc", by the English writer, V. Sackville-West.

From Cleveland, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Roland W. White arrived this week, to open their home in the Country Club.

JUDGES to determine successful candidates for the Phelan Awards in Literature and Art for the year 1937-38 were announced today by the trustees of the estate of the late Senator James D. Phelan. Those who will act as a comittee of award are Professor Hardin Craig of Stanford University; Robinson Jeffers, the noted poet of Carmel, and Miriam Michelson, well-known California author.

The two fellowships, each carrying a stipend of $1000, were provided for under the terms of a bequest made by the late Senator Phelan to bring about a further development of native talent in California in the field of literature and art. This year there will be historical narrative, and verse narrative.

Competition is open to both men and women. Applicants for the felloyships must be native born citizens of California, and must be between the ages of 20 and 35.

Applications for the fellowships are being received from all parts of California and should be sent to the office of the James D. Phelan Awards in Literature and Art, 658 Phelan Building, San Francisco, on or before Feb. 15, 1937.

Carmel Homes to Be Shown in Book

If you see a man in front of your house sometime during the next few weeks, and he is pointing a little black box at your domicile, don't be alarmed—he is not an anarchist attempting to blow you out of house and home. He is merely taking a picture of your residence.

Some weeks ago, a movie company, World-Wide Productions by name, moved to town in the persons of Wilmon Menard and A. L. Hamblin, its heads. They have been taking a movie of Carmel and many of its famous residents, Pon Chung, our Chinese fireman, for one, which will soon be released in Hollywood. While shooting scenes of Carmel, Mr. Hamblin is spending his time between movie shots taking pictures of each and every house in Carmel. When he is finished he will have the pictures placed in a book, each picture with the name of the owner or resident underneath, and the book will be placed in the public library for all to see. He has done the same thing in two other California towns, Ontario and Pomona, and the books in the libraries of these two towns are in constant demand. According to Mr. Hamblin, the book, which will be donated to the library, will be a complete pictorial record of every home in Carmel. He will continue to take the pictures for some weeks, developing them as he goes.

TO DEMONSTRATE SALAD MAKING SCIENTIFICALLY

"What is the difference between a wicked woman and a salad?" a French child would ask you. And, smiling knowingly, he would give the answer: "the more you shake a wicked woman, the worse she grows, but the more you shake a salad the better it turns out." In this old French riddle lies the secret, or the hint, if you prefer, how to make this celebrated French dish. Those who would like to know more practically about it should meet Mme. Pirenne next Saturday, Jan 30, at Espindola's where she plans not only to demonstrate the excellence of her well known vinaigrette but also the right use of it.

William McPhillips of Carmel is a patient at Peninsula Community hospital.

WITH the desire to encourage interest in art in junior colleges of California, the art gallery and department of art of Mills college are sponsoring in March an exhibition of the work of junior college students exclusively, according to Roi Partridge, departmental chairman, and Dr. Alfred Neymeyer, director of the gallery.

The exhibition will be held in the Mills College art gallery from March 7 to April 4. This is the first time such a general competition will have been held on the California coast, the announcement stated.

Open to the more than two score junior colleges in the state, the exhibition will include paintings, drawings, prints, sculpture and craft work. Each junior college will be permitted to show ten examples of paintings, drawing or prints, and in addition two examples of sculpture or craft work.

DENOUNCING the word novelette as "cheap and incorrect", the editors of the magazine Story in their February issue rescue from oblivion the word "novella" as the proper term for the longer form of short story. The word, which is of Italian origin, is included in both American and English dictionaries but in recent years has fallen into disuse.

"In connection with the newly introduced longer stories which Story is now publishing," the editors say, "there seems to be no word in the language except that cheap and banal one, novelette, which sounds like the potted novel it usually is or like something out of the war years' vocabulary (like "farmerette" or "flannelette"), we have gone somewhat far afield and are bringing back the ancient and traditional word novella for this neglected but highly readable form of literature."

THE exhibition of paintings by Nicolai Remisoff and W. F. Rauschnabel in the Mills college art gallery has caught the fancy of art lovers in the San Francisco bay area, judging from the number of visitors to the gallery since the opening of the exhibition.

Remisoff, a native of Petrograd, has had a colorful career, having been a leader of the modern school in pre-Bolshevistic Russia, before fleeing to Paris at the time of the Revolution. In Paris, he designed the settings for the Chauve Souris; and at the invitation of Morris Gest, he came to New York City.

THE M. H. de Young Memorial Museum will hold an exhibition of Islamic art beginning Feb. 20. This exhibition will be the only completely compreheisive exhibition of Mohammedan art ever shown at one time in this country, and will include works of art from Persia, Turkey, India, Egypt, Spain, Sicily and other countries from the twelfth to the eighteenth centuries, introducing to the people of the Pacific coast for the first time the magnificence of Mohammedan art during the finest period of its development.

The exhibition is in charge of Professor Mehmet Aga-Oglu of the University of Michigan, who began work on it when he was in San Francisco last summer. Dr. Aga-Oglu is an internationally known authority on Islamic art. He will return to San Francisco in February to supervise the instalaltion of the exhibition.

Two classes in art to be offered by the Mills college extension education department, one giving instruction in life drawing and the other presenting a survey of early Chinese art, will be started on the campus during the forthcoming week. A third class in art for children, ranging in age from six to 16 years, will begin weekly Saturday morning meetings in the art gallery on the campus, Saturday, Feb. 6.

Dr. Frank P. Topping Opens Offices Here

Dr. Frank P. Topping, who recently came to Carmel to reside after practicing medicine in San Francisco for 25 years and later in Sacramento, has announced the opening of offices in the Las Tienda building and will specialize in maternity and diseases of women. Dr. Topping taught these subjects in Stanford University for a number of years in addition to his private practice.

DON'T LET A GOOD THING DIE

Dr. L. Cody Marsh "lit candles"— to use his own figure of speech, demonstrated in his Sunday night lecture at Community church— in the hearts of several hundred peninsula people during the course of his psychiatric mission here last week end. The results of this interesting experiment were rich beyond the most optimistic expectations of the small group of people originally sponsoring it. Conversation with a few of those who received, not entertainment, but a sort of spiritual rededication of themselves to a better life, is all that is needed to indicate that Carmel was blessed by its contact with a remarkable man.

Dr Marsh's mission in life is not to solve other people's problems, but to awaken within them the faculties which they can use to solve their own problems. He has a certain technique which was evidenced in his manner of answering questions after each of the eight lectures which he made during his four-day mission. Many people were baffled by them, inclined to complain— "But he didn't answer my question at all." And that is because the questioners were seeking a magic formula— How to be healthy, wealthy and wise in ten easy lessons.

Well, the lessons are not easy, and there is no magic formula. Dr. Marsh can indicate the goals, but he cannot say to each person, "To be happy, you must do thus and so." He can stimulate in each individual the feeling that it would be eminently worth while to live more usefully and more harmoniously, and if the desire is sincere, the individual will begin to seek, within the materials and circumstance of his own life, how best to work out his own salvation. He will be stimulated to read books, perhaps to organize study groups where he can talk over with otheres the problems which may be mutual. He will attempt to look at himself objectively, wondering if the causes of the little irritations and the big troubles of life may not lie at least partially within himself. It is much easier, and very natural, to blame our troubles on other people or circumstances which seem to be beyond our control, but the result is that the troubles stay with us. The hard course, but the effective one, is to get to work and do something about it.

And so it is proposed that we make a start. Elsewhere in these columns will be found the announcement of a meeting open to all those who would like to have a hand in organizing groups for further study along lines suggested by Dr. Marsh. Those who are sufficiently interested will work out the plan. One young woman has expressed a desire to lead an adolescent group. Suggestions have been made for a play to be put on by men and women over 50. A married couple has volunteered to write a "scenario" of a typical family row on a juvenile level, with the second act to repeat the same scene as it should be played by adults. There have been inquiries about starting a child guidance study group. Some of the business men would like to discuss further the ideas Dr. Marsh left with them. Some of the single women are interested in studying the field where psychology merges with metaphysics. A great deal of interest has been stimulated, and it should be canalized. Possibly one central council could serve as a clearing house for all these ideas, and to work out the mechanics of carrying them out effectively. There is no limit to what people can do along intellectual and spiritual lines when they are genuinely interested, as they are at present. It is to be hoped that all who have ideas on the subject will come to the initial meeting and contribute their share.

Maybe it has been said before, but it will bear repeating: Many automobile accidents are caused when the only nut on the machine that is tight is the driver.

LOST LOVELINESS

While still the ancients dodder down the street
With cackling voices and forgetful eyes,
Unwarmed by quickening of the April earth
Untouched by splendor of the sunset skies,
You whose hair was like a cloud of gold,
You who loved the laughter and the singing,
Now lie where spiders spin their crystal nets
Unwatched except by wild birds at their winging.

—Frances Elliott.

VOICES REINCARNATE

At dawn have stars flung
Their songs to mute-throated birds?
Filmy air becomes
Jeweled with a glittering
Chorus of constellations!

This obbligato
Of a mourning-dove must be
The moon's ghost calling. . . . .

HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU

By LOIS COLLINS PALMER

Never have I seen this village as dormant as it has been during the recent cold snap (still with us as these words are written, with the prayerful hope that by the time they are printed, the breezes will have recovered their customary suavity). Californians, like sub-tropical California gardens just turn up their toes in a cold snap, because really and truly, this weather is unusual. Unlike the gardens, however, the people can retire indoors, and do. Honest to goodness, the only people abroad on the streets last week were the advertising solicitors and reporters on Carmel's thriving crop of newspapers, and none of them looked very happy.

It is really too bad that the human race has not the power to hybernate. I would really recommend that we all go into our caves and stay there, in a state of suspended animation, until the spring thaws us out. One does encounter a few people who say they find the cold weather "stimulating", but many of us turn distinctly sluggish, and it is an effort that scarcely seems worth while to go about the necessary business of living. Such heating devices as ordinarily are quite sufficient for our mild winters have seemed totally inadequate to drive out the bitter, penetrating cold, and even in what passes here for snug, well-insulated houses, queer little drafts come crawling out from unexpected and hitherto undiscovered sources, and caress one's shuddering frame.

And knowing that in the very nature of things it can't last long, because every day is a little longer and the sun is gradually creeping northward again, we hesitate to do anything about it. Anything, that is, in the way of stocking up with flannel undies and nighties, and woolen stockings. No, the best thing would be a period of hybernation, complete instead of just half-way measures which consist of huddling before the fireplace in a state of partial torpor. Stores, shops and offices are rarely adequately heated, and it would be a good idea in this weather to declare a general holiday, which we could very well do if we didn't have to eat and stoke the fire. So as the groceries and fuel yards have to keep open, everyone else feels guilty about shutting up shop and going into the silence.

And speaking of colds— as who is not these days?— here is, not a cure, but a sure preventative, according to a friend of ours, who is in the dairy products business. I admit it may sound a bit ulterior, but the proof of the pudding is that he hasn't had a cold for 10 years. Every night before going to bed he drinks a 10-ounce glass of warm milk, with a little salt, and a pat of butter melted in it. He says it alkenizes you so effectively that the bugs just can't bite you.

FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN

The State Board of Health reports the appalling fact that there are 25,000 crippled children in the state of California. Georgia has its Warm Springs; Massachusetts its Peabody Institute; Baltimore, New York and Chicago their great convalescent homes for crippled children, but California has done very little to meet this crying need. A few small private convalescent homes and day clinics, but the state has no institution, open to rich and poor alike, where victims of infantile paralysis, club feet and bone tuberculosis may, after hospitalization, receive the latest scientific treatment which can help every crippled child, and restore many to complete health.

Impressed by the need for such an institution, Dr. Lincoln Wirt has resigned his position as Director of the Golden Rule Foundation to inaugurate a movement to supply this want. A suitable location was found in the home of the late Margaret Fowler near Chino on the grounds of the California Junior Republic, and was offered to him in accordance with the terms of Mrs. Fowler's will, which directed that it be used for some benevolent purpose. This property, known as "Casa Colina", Dr. Wirt has secured on a long lease at $1 per year, on the proviso that a responsible body of sponsors could be organized and incorporated, to undertake to gather the money necessary to furnish, equip and open within one year a modern, scientific convalescent hospital with beds for 50 crippled children, the number to be increased as funds permit.

Kenyon J. Scudder, the chief probation officer of Los Angeles county, who addressed a group meeting of the League of Women Voters at Pine Inn Saturday on the Coordinated Council idea of dealing with juvenile delinquency, is one of 50 leading citizens of California who has accepted Dr. Wirt's invitation to act on the advisory board for Casa Colina.

The State Board of Health has endorsed the enterprise and will give certain financial assistance. The County Board of Education of San Bernardino county will conduct a public school at Casa Colina for little cripples. There will be federal aid, through the National Youth Administration, in preparing the buildings for use, providing exercise apparatus and play areas.

Encouragement has also come from committees planning President Roosevelt's Birthday Balls, held throughout the country on Jan. 30. Thirty per cent of the proceeds of these parties goes to the President for the support of the orthopedic institution at Warm Springs; 70 per cent remains at the disposal of the local communities to be used for the benefit of crippled children within the state. The local President's birthday fete, the dinner to be held at Hotel San Carlos, in Monterey, the dance afterwards at the Monterey American Legion hall, will give an opportunity to all peninsulans to assist with the work of establishing California's own hospital for the rehabilitation of children crippled by infantile paralysis. The Carmel Roosevelt club is working hand in hand with committees from "over the hill" to secure a good turn-out at the President's birthday party, and finds particular stimulation to this effort in the timely announcement of the plans for Casa Colina.

SOCIETY | PINE NEEDLES | LOCALS

ANOTHER year has rolled over the head of Mrs. Mary C. Burton, as lightly as the 90 which had gone before it, and yesterday afternoon her 91st anniversary was observed with a tea given by Mrs. Otto W. Bardarson at her home on Dolores. "Aunty" Burton continues to enjoy excellent health, to display remarkable vitality and a great capacity for enjoying life. As usual, she was the life of the party. In giving the tea Mrs. Bardarson also honored her aunt, Mrs. Ernest Anderson, her house guest from Seattle. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Joseph Schoeninger and Mrs. Austin B. Chinn, who alternately presided at the tea urn. Those invited to the affair were: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schoeninger, Rev. and Mrs. Austin B. Chinn, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. Ross C. Dr. and Mrs. C. W. West of Reno, where he is a prominent physician and surgeon, are spending several weeks in Carmel. Dr. West is a brother of Miss Gay West, librarian at Taft, who is a frequent Carmel visitor.

For her marriage to Henry H. Hasty at Del Monte chapel last Sunday afternoon, Miss Mary Frances Hughes wore a smart gray ensemble, with a corsage of gardenias and violets. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Howard Cave of Culter. Mrs. Hasty is the daughter of Dr. J. L. Hughes, and Mr. Hasty is the son of Mrs. Louise Hasty. Both are popular members of the Carmel younger set. Relatives of the young couple and a number of their friends attended the wedding ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Theodore Bell. Coming from out of town were Mrs. R. J. Rose of Dinuba, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Moore of Fresno, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Prentice of Fresno, Mr. and Mrs. Max Newman of Arion, Miss June Johnson of Fresno and Jerome Hasty of Hollywood. A reception and buffet supper at the home of the bride followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Hasty have returned from a brief honeymoon trip and are making their home in "Little John," one of the Lincoln Green cottages on Carmelo Road.

"Don't Be Modern, Be Happy" Says Rockwell Kent

"It is far more important for a person to be happy than for him to be modern."

So declared Rockwell Kent recently, and he is a man who ought to know.

The famous artist, adventurer and lecturer can speak with such frankness because he has a versatility which includes work in oils, engravings, etchings and illustrations.

"Do not try to find an explanation for works of art," Mr. Kent went on to say. "Most of them haven't any."

Asked as to what he considered the probable future trend of modern art, Mr. Kent replied:

"We artists must realize that it is our own fault if the public prefers such things as detective stories to our work."

The matter disposed of, he returned to his premise that a person should be happy rather than modern.

"If you like a picture, keep it on your wall. If you don't, throw it out, regardless of the vogue of the moment or the opinion of others."

Rockwell Kent is a preeminent practitioner of many branches of the graphic art. He is direct, forceful and simple. And he is an engaging teller of tales.

His work in addition to being in several nationally known museums, also hangs in the Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh and the estates of Henry Frick and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

TRAIL STILL TOUGH

The rough and romantic old "Trail of '98", into the Alaska hinterland, is just as hard to negotiate now as it was when the gold seekers swarmed into the territory. Bayne Beauchamp, University of California graduate, and leader of an expedition along the old trail, writes of the many hardships encountered.

SPANISH CONSUL FORGOTTEN

Senor Pedro de Igual, who is Spanish Consul in Australia, has been completely forgotten. He lives in Sydney and waits for mail that never arrives. He only knows that Spain is still on the map through newspaper reports and that there is a rebellion in his native country.

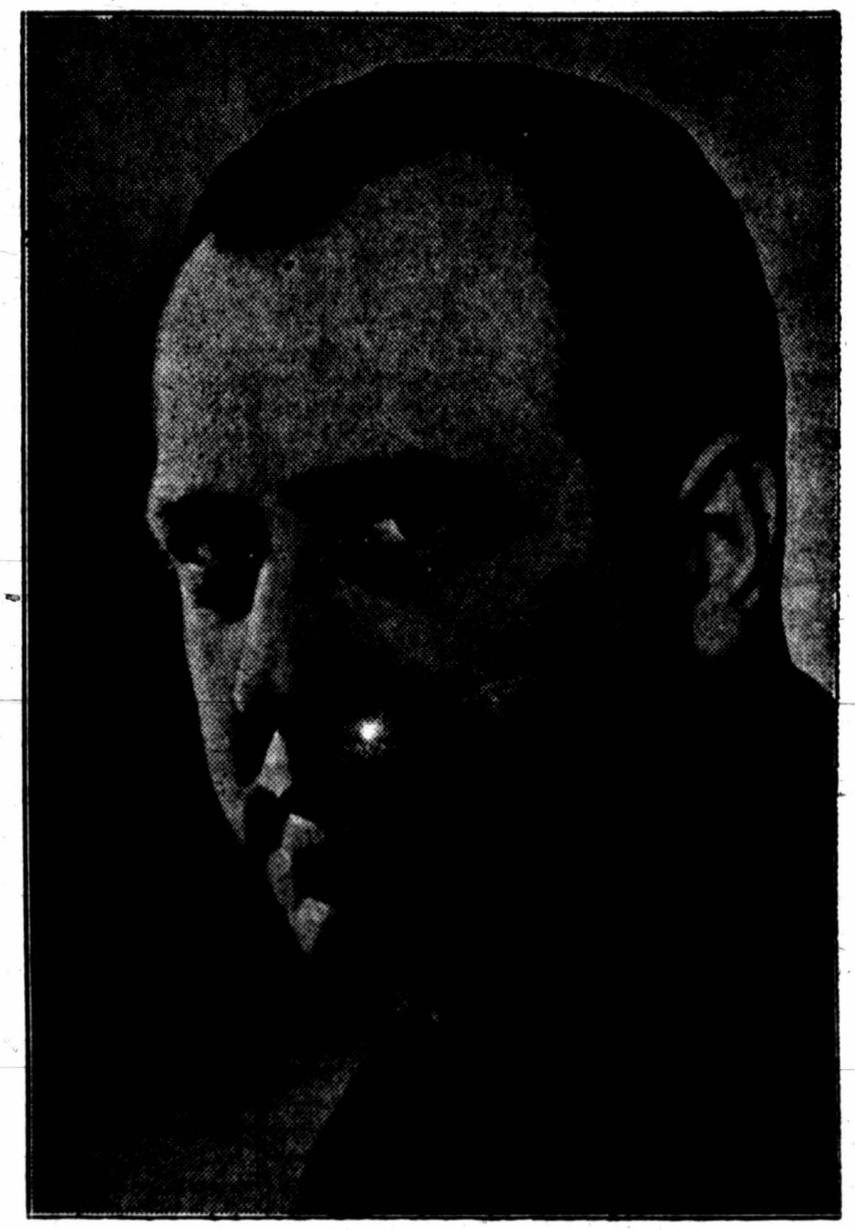
Richard Crooks, Who Sings at Sunset Feb. 6



RICHARD CROOKS has an interesting theory about radio programs. As a finished musician he naturally deplores cheap music and, even more, good music performed cheaply, and there is, as every one knows, a fair amount of each on the radio. This he believes is due more to the sponsors who think they know the public taste, than to the artists who at least know music.

Whenever he has the opportunity Crooks introduces into his programs some new song by the classical writers and the deluge of fan mail which results convinces him that the average person likes good music. He maintains that classical music is not more popular very largely because the public confuses the meaning of the word classical with "uninteresting" or "heavy." People who pay out the huge sums for radio advertising are naturally anxious to please their listeners and in their anxiety to have a "sure fire" program stick to the well-proved favorites. "The Last Rose of Summer" is undoubtedly a popular song, but we can have too much of it, just as one can have too much candy.

In the music of classical writers are hundreds of simple melodious songs which are seldom sung. It is these songs which Crooks thinks should be given a place on radio programs to relieve the strain on the old chestnuts. Another thing which he thinks very decided is that foreign songs should be sung to American audiences in English. In Europe, he says, the people demand that their own language be used and there is no reason why Americans should not have the same courtesy from their artists. If this were done he feels that the great songs of other countries would be better understood and liked in this country.

On Feb. 6 Richard Crooks is singing in Carmel for the first time and the music lovers of the county will have an opportunity to hear in the life a great voice which most of us have heard only over the radio.

Wm. McPhillips Called by Death

William McPhillips, well known Carmel painting contractor, died early yesterday morning in a local hospital of complications following an attack of pneumonia. He was taken to the hospital Tuesday night by members of the fire department. He was believed to be recovering when his death came.

Mr. McPhillips came to Carmel about 12 years ago, and has been in the painting business since then. He is survived by his wife and two children. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Mrs. Wm. C. Butcher Passes In Pasadena

Mrs. William Charles Butcher, former long-time resident of Carmel, and one of its most valued citizens, died sudenly Wednesday, in Pasadena, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Steele. Since leaving Carmel Mrs. Butcher has been living in Riverside, but has kept in close touch with the village and her many friends here, through frequent visits. She was a sister of Frederick Preston Search. Funeral services were to be held in Pasadena today.

NEW ART DECEPTION

Chief Leon Ballerat, of the Paris police, says that American customs inspectors are being used to assist in the sale of spurious oil paintings. Fair imitations of masters are painted and the name of the artist is forged, but barely hidden under the signature of the fake artist. The American customs is said to be advised that a genuine work of art is hidden under another name and the higher duty is assessed. The dealer gets a statement of the genuine which is stipulated in his receipt. The only extra expense to which the dealers are put is the higher duty.

Legion to Hear Eugene Bennett

The first American Legion state officer to visit the Carmel post since its organization, Eugene D. Bennett, judge advocate of the state department of the legion, will be the guest speaker at the February meeting of Carmel Post 512, Monday night at Legion hall. Mr. Bennett, a prominent San Francisco attorney, who has been active in the legion for many years, will speak on the present and future programs of the legion. All officers and members of posts in this area are being invited to attend.

Corum Jackson will be in charge of the meeting, which will start at 8, and he asks all local war veterans to attend. Refreshments will be served following the meeting.

Mrs. R. D. Sproull has returned after spending a week in San Francisco.

No Bach Festival Rehearsal This Week

There will be no Bach festival rehearsals next Sunday and Monday, but the usual weekly schedule will be resumed the following week. The orchestra meets next on Sunday evening, Feb. 7, and the chorus the following evening, both at 8 o'clock and both in the first grade room, at the south end of Sunset school campus. The scores of the new cantata, "Gottes Zeit" will have arrived from the east, and will be given first reading at the next rehearsals. Bernard Callery is conducting preliminary rehearsals, between visits of Michel Penha, festival director.
